The Green Mile is a 1996 serial novel by American writer Stephen King. It tells the story of death row supervisor Paul Edgecombe's encounter with John Coffey, an unusual inmate who displays inexplicable healing and empathetic abilities. The serial novel was originally released in six volumes before being republished as a single-volume work. The book is an example of magical realism.

The Green Mile (novel) - Wikipedia

The trouble with Stephen King is that his "Voice" gets into your head and you don't want it to go away .He doesn't write at you he talks to you and you almost always find yourself wanting to hear more .Of course The Green Mile is an absolute classic ,and anyone who hasn't read it really ,really should .King has a well deserved reputation for horror but this really isn't that ..unless it's the horror of what human

What I mean by this is that "The Green Mile" takes the format of an old man recalling, bit by bit, his experiences from 60 years prior. As would be befitting of something like this, this means the narrative is frequently interjected with frank opinions, incongruous recollections, and general use of slang that makes it feel exactly like a real person is recalling a real set of memories.
